"Prize Premium" Cook Stove.

PATENTED, 1851.

This superior article has only been in use since January, 1851, and since that they have given such universal satisfaction that they are now the principal stove sold up the Illinois, Missouri and Mississippi rivers. The late improvement made by Filley, by putting a division in the draft below, divides the heat as it passes under the over, and prevents it from all concentrating on the centre of the fire-plate, as it does in other stovers of similar form. Another great improvement in the Premium Stove is the Patent Damper; which is so constructed as to in-

Another great improvement in the Premium Side is the Falch Damper; which is so constructed as to insure it against breakage by fire; and if necessary, by turning the damper up a little, you can throw the heat under the oven without burning what is baking, as some do.

I have just made another great improvement in Filley's Patent Prize Premium stove, by adding to it a large, heavy Grate, for the wood to rest on, which not only aids the draft, by keeping it always clear, but also neeps the wood from breaking, and burning out the bottem of the stove.

This Grate is made so as to prevent the wood from falling against the doors, and burning them through, as a the case with stoves that have no grates; and as we have the only Premium Cook Stoves that have Grates them we heatigte not in saving that we can sell a change that the case he had also where it is saving that we can sell a change the store they can be had also where it.

n them, we he sitate not in saying that we can sell a cheaper and better stove than can be had elsewhere in be western country. Persons wishing to buy stoves would do well to call before purchasting.

The difference between Fittey's Patent Premium and other stoves of the same form in use, are, in he first place, the improvements made in the Draft Damper; and secondly, a contraction of the amoke flues, be first place, the improvements made in the Drait Damper; and secondry, a contraction of the amoke muss, by which the heat is more coofined against the Oven, heating it more rigular and quicker, and always interest the stove to shaw well, in any situation. Thirdly, the boilers are nearer the fire than in most stoves, and having the flue contracted to the width of the boiler in front, it brings all the heat in use. Fourthy, the ovens are much larger than the e of most stoves of the same kind in use, and particularly the Cincinnati stoves, as the evens are very narrow and less useful. In all sizes of the Prize Premium Cool stove the openings in front and back are the same size—so that you have two eval openings, the Wash Boil of the following and the contraction of the temperings the Wash Boil of the same size—so that you have two eval openings, the Wash Boil of the following and the contraction of the temperings and the elements. r fitting either, or you can make four round holes of a size and any of the trimmings will fit either All of the above stoves may be procured at the
